PRISON REFORMER NOW SING SING WARDEN

Thomas M Osborne

Auburn, N. Y.—Thomas Mott Osborne, millionaire prison reformer recently appointed warden of Sing Sing, is the man who spent a short term in Auburn prison studying prison problems from the "inside looking out."

Osborne, who is chairman of the New York State prison reform commission, believed that the prison reform and penology have been studied only by men "outside looking in." So in September, 1913, he had himself sentenced to a short term at hard labor in Auburn prison.
